

Look to the stars and know the future ...

BOGASCOPIES

Aries: There is no excuse for your behavior last week (your neighbors, who use high-powered binoculars to look in on your lanai, were thoroughly mortified by what they saw) but volunteering at the church to do your penance was most titillating. Maybe it shouldn't have been? Do not allow egg-sucking dogs near your physical presence on Sunday.

Taurus: Never doubt the turning worm. Keep an open mind in all things pertaining to biblical archaeology, particularly involving Archangel Uriel. If you're going to order a dozen life-sized flamingo statues in an attempt to entice live flamingos to your yard, you might want to let UPS Kevin know so he can prepare.

Gemini: Trying not to overspend on an upcoming trip is becoming impossible, as you seem to have the answer for monetary anti-matter stuffed somewhere deep in the pockets of your lederhosen. A stock option on the diet water market pays off big time, though, so you'll be flush in the end.

5-21-6-20

Cancer: A large weight will be lifted from your shoulders this week regarding a health matter. A celebration will be in order, but refrain from drinking to the bottom of the Jameson bottle at Scarpa's or you'll find yourself being a bit too spicy with Mike. Mike likes his drinks spicy – not his patrons. Black roses from an unknown source will be the source of mystery for you and a source of contention from your own patron demon ... errr, I mean, your significant other.

Leo: When your nephew asks you to help him by writing a bit of macros for his gnome sequencer make sure to include the Pass Through Planes of Existence mode. Something will be broken that you will be blamed for and something will be eaten that was yours.

Virgo: Houseguests who come on Thursday will applaud your passion for aardvark-print upholstery. A spark ignites at the library when you see someone you haven't heard from in a very long time. Share meatloaf with them.

8-23-9-22

Libra: It's no mystery that the average Joe doesn't "get" you, but you can't let it bother you in the least.

9-23-10-22

While something will happen on Monday will leave you feeling more isolated than Kanye West's sense of humor, know that one day you will be amongst your people.

Scorpio: A change in your prescription will leave you lying on the couch staring out the window and wondering why there's a "d" in fridge but not in refrigerator, and whether it's the "s" or the "c" that's silent in the word scent.

10-23-11-21

Sagittarius: Solitude, for you, is not easy. An abrupt departure late in the week leaves you shell-shocked and seeking comfort in a Nutella jar, but this malaise will pass. A man who farmer-blows his nose may seem gross to you, but beware: He will play a part in your future.

11-22-12-21

Capricorn: Your phone's spellcheck will lead a friend astray when you send a message regarding a strange gourd. Do not express the shock you feel when you walk in on your spouse doing something very strange (this is not a moment to judge but you might inquire as to where the basset hound came from).

Aquarius: Lurking somewhere in your subconscious is the answer to why you've always had an aversion to pimentos, but don't be surprised if the answer that pops into your head this week is more than mildly unpleasant. Frightful, in fact. A raccoon at your family member's house may entice you to take its picture, but if you get too close you'll find out why people don't have them as pets.

Pisces: Your Aunt Agnes the phrenologist keeps feeling your head at every family gathering to see when you'll begin to assimilate to your ultra-conservative relatives, leaving you feel somewhat like the Lamb of Tartary. Unbeknownst to you a person has rubbed a lamp and wished you would come to them, to don't make it weird if you blink and end up in someone's boudoir.
